The Business School is regarded as a leader in the region, and is one of the very few Australian schools to hold business and accounting accreditation from AACSB International and EQUIS accreditation from the European Foundation for Management Development. It is also the only Australian member school of CEMS, the Community of European Management Schools & International Companies.

The Discipline of Accounting is a well-resourced group of around 50 academics and 80 sessional staff. It is strongly committed to excellence in both research and teaching. The Discipline is home to two highly rated international journals, Abacus and Australian Accounting Review and, through its Accounting Foundation, works closely with industry, business and the accounting profession.

About you

The University values courage and creativity; openness and engagement; inclusion and diversity; and respect and integrity. As such, we see the importance in recruiting talent aligned to these values in the pursuit of research excellence. We are seeking applicants for the position of Lecturer Accounting. As a successful applicant, you will contribute to:

- the effective teaching of accounting units, curriculum development, and the enhancement of teaching innovation
- the research strengths of the discipline, including the pursuit of research grants and regular publication in journals of high standing
- the school's expanding program of professional and industry research collaboration
- the supervision of higher degree research students
- interdisciplinary collaborations within the University and with external stakeholders
- academic administration.

The selection criteria for this role are available for viewing in an attachment at the bottom of this job advertisement.

This position is your opportunity to join a high calibre, dynamic group that is well resourced, very research active and teaches a variety of accounting courses that attract the very best students from Australia and internationally.
