seek faculty who have a real passion for a culturally diverse environment.

In particular, we presently seek instructors for Management Science. You should be able to teach the following topics:

Linear Programming
Integer Programming
Nonlinear Programming
Transportation, Transshipment, and Assignment Models
Network Flow Models
Queuing Theory
Time-Series Forecasting
Simulation

We invite applicants to teach one or more graduate or undergraduate courses:

MG-GY 6103 Management Science (Graduate Course)

Weekday and Time Negotiable/Weekend Sessions Also Available

This course introduces major concepts and methods associated with Management Science, which deals with the application of quantitative modeling and analysis to management problems. Students learn to employ important analytical tools, to determine the assumptions used, and to recognize the limitations of such methods. The course discusses methods of linear and nonlinear programming, queuing, decision analysis, simulations and game theory. The course also introduces modeling with spreadsheets.

Qualifications

You should be an excellent teacher. You should have a graduate degree in Management Science, Operations Research, Industrial Engineering, Economics, Mathematics, or a closely related discipline and a record of teaching experience in these areas. Experience in AMPL, MATLAB, R and Tableau is preferred. Ph.D. Preferred.
