media, and society, social media in corporate communication, writing for the web, communication design for writers, internal communication, external communication, and/or other courses related to the successful candidate's area(s) of expertise. Teaching assignments may require teaching day, evening, and online classes as needed. Participate in professional organizations and in course, curriculum, and program development. Advise students and provide career guidance. Participate in campus, university, and community service activities.

Qualifications: Master's degree or doctoral degree in communication or a related field is required. Prior teaching, research, and professional experience are required; professional certification (Communication Management Professional/IABC or Accreditation in Public Relations/PRSA) will be viewed favorably. Commitment to high-quality instruction in a student-centered environment is expected. Interest in active and collaborative learning, the instructional use of technology, and hybrid and online teaching is an advantage. Enthusiasm for working in a multidisciplinary environment is important. The successful applicant will have demonstrated commitment and advocacy for diversity in the workplace.

Campus Information: Penn State is a multi-campus public land-grant university that improves the lives of the people of Pennsylvania, the nation, and the world. Our instructional mission includes undergraduate, graduate, and continuing and distance education informed by scholarship and research. Our research, scholarship, and creative activities promote human and economic development through the expansion of knowledge and its applications in the natural and applied sciences, social sciences, arts, humanities, and the professions.

Penn State York is one of more than twenty Penn State campuses statewide. It is a student-centered campus of approximately 750 students; about 15% are adult learners. The coursework for the first two years of more than 275 Penn State majors is offered, as well as twelve baccalaureate degrees and five associate degrees that can be completed entirely at Penn State York. Successful candidates will be expected to work effectively with a diversity of students that represent a range of backgrounds and social identities, including those with varying levels of academic preparation, and to demonstrate a commitment to innovative, engaging, and student-centered learning and teaching.

Penn State York is located in southcentral Pennsylvania, approximately two hours from Washington, DC or Philadelphia. The campus rests on 51 acres, overlooking the historic city of York. Students and faculty at Penn State York have all of the resources of a major research university at their disposal but in a small college atmosphere. Class sizes are small, and the student/faculty ratio is low, so students can receive much individual attention. Our faculty members are committed to providing a high-quality educational experience to their students and are actively engaged in research. Our students receive a
