own scholarly activities, advise Ph.D. students, and are expected to publish in top journals in finance and related fields. Successful candidates are expected to teach in our graduate and undergraduate programs in theoretical and/or empirical Finance. New faculty are also expected to help develop new courses on relevant and high-demand topics.

The finance area at the School of Business promotes and values cross-disciplinary research and is active across various fields, including corporate finance, contract theory, energy finance, behavioral finance, macro asset pricing, investments, and entrepreneurial finance. Prospective candidates are expected to contribute to and amplify the research endeavors of the department through their own scholarly pursuits. The university provides a favorable teaching workload and robust support for faculty research, ensuring a competitive and nurturing environment for academics. Successful candidates are expected to engage in curriculum development, student advisement, and program events while pursuing research.

Application Procedure

Candidates should express their interest in being considered by emailing Josa Balisi. (jbalisi@stevens.edu) with the subject title "TT Finance Application". Please include in your email a letter of application, CV, research statement, teaching statement that includes a) teaching interests, b) teaching philosophy, and c) a plan on how to create an inclusive environment for students of all backgrounds in terms of classroom teaching, student advising, and graduate student mentoring, and d) a recent publication representative of the applicants' research agenda. Applications without these documents will be considered incomplete. If available, please also include teaching evaluations in your email. Three letters of recommendation will be required at a later stage.

Applications will be considered until the position is filled, but candidates are encouraged to submit applications as soon as possible as the review of candidates will start immediately. This position is contingent upon final budget approval.
