(ASU), which means that AUT degree programs and related curricula mirror the corresponding programs at ASU. This position offers an exciting opportunity to contribute to our growing academic community, engage in teaching and scholarly activities, and inspire the next generation of students in business management and entrepreneurship.

Note: The medium of instruction for all courses is in English.

Accepted candidates are expected to start work by August 1st, 2025.

Teaching:

The primary function of this position is teaching core undergraduate (and graduate) courses in management, strategy, entrepreneurship, marketing, finance, accounting, supply chain management, and data analytics at the School of Business (SoB). Faculty members are expected to be effective instructors and mentors to the students. The activities include but are not limited to the following:

- Preparing course materials in consultations with the program coordinator.
- Preparing course syllabi that include learning outcomes, activities, evaluation methods, major course topics, attendance policies, and other policies required by the School and the university.
- Creating assignments/projects that encourage students in active learning, train critical thinking, and develop problem-solving skills.
- Implementing modern teaching-learning pedagogy and practices (i.e., flip-classroom and experiential learning).
- Using an online learning management system (i.e., Canvas) and other instructional technology/tools (i.e., Smartboards, Projector, etc.) as needed. Note: Support and training will be available for faculty members new to online learning platforms and tools.
- Evaluating student performance according to departmental standards.
- Providing constructive feedback to the students on their learning and performance.
- Providing information regarding course learning outcomes, among others, needed for accreditation and quality control.

Scholarly Activities:
